ABSTRACT

Noting that children need to learn to cooperate with peers, older children, adults, and parents, this activity book presents 30 charts to help parents help their children learn and practice social skills. The illustrations, coloring activities, and rewards for parents to offer are designed to keep children entertained and motivated. The book includes hints for parents and tips on setting up rewards and how often to reward. Skills included on the charts include: (1) listening to others; (2) showing you care; (3) following instructions; (4) controlling your anger; (5) accepting "no"; (6) correcting mistakes; (7) interrupting in a nice way; (8) saying something nice; (9) telling the truth; (10) saying you are sorry; and (11) offering to help someone. A list of additional social skills for children to learn is included. (JPB)
